Celebration marks 47 years of Jamaican Independence

By Mass Communication Specialist 3rd Class Leona Mynes

The Guantanamo (GTMO) Bay community commemorated Jamaica's 47th year of independence from British rule in a celebration Aug. 8 at Ferry Landing.

According to Everton Hylton, the Jamaican Independence Day Committee president, approximately 700 members of the community attended the event.

Jamaican comedians Ity and Fancy Cat and Jamaican reggae artists L.U.S.T provided entertainment for the concert at the beach. Naval Station Commanding Officer Capt. Steven Blaisdell commended the Jamaican employees here in GTMO about their contributions to the military's mission.

"The Jamaican community here at GTMO is the backbone of the contractor workforce, and without them, executing our various missions would be difficult, if not impossible," Blaisdell said.

Blaisdell said that the work performed by the Jamaican workers in GTMO is a direct link to maintaining the command's morale.

"We are indebted to our Jamaican friends for their sacrifices which ensure the safety of lives and property here at GTMO," Blaisdell said. "It is this selfless dedication to duty that is representative of the Jamaican community."

According to CIA.gov, Jamaica gained full independence from 307 years of British rule Aug. 6, 1962.

"Jamaicans were brought to this 'new world' in shackles and chains worn like jewelry," said Pastor Daniel Kelly, the keynote speaker at the event. "But they did not forget that they were princes, princesses, kings and queens."

Kelly said each generation of slaves brought new light to their oppression, learning to read and write their slave owners' language.

"Education is what we must teach the youth of Jamaica," Kelly said. "Jamaica will not die with us, but will be ruled by our children in the coming years."

Through these struggles, Kelly said, Jamaican heritage was born.

Blaisdell acknowledged the rich culture of Jamaica and what that country's spirit brought to GTMO in his closing remarks.

"On behalf of all GTMO residents, I thank you for your indomitable spirit, your sense of duty to this community and most importantly, your friendship."

SCUBA DIVING SAFETY TIPS

from NDC (DSW/SW) Michael A. Hajduk,
the Naval Station Command Diving Officer

All certified SCUBA divers must register with NAVSTA GTMO Port Operations before diving in Guantanamo Bay.

Dive plans must be submitted to NAVSTA Port Operations prior to commencing any SCUBA diving evolution.

Do not skip breaths or interrupt breathing at any time while diving.

Maintain a controlled ascent to the surface.

U.S. Navy Divers ascend 30 feet-per-minute. Civilian divers ascend 60 feet-per-minute. When in doubt, slower is better.

Never dive if suffering from a respiratory condition such as a cold or any other condition that causes respiratory congestion.

If you are being treated for any medical condition consult your physician and make sure you are cleared to dive.

If you are taking any prescribed medication consult your physician prior to diving, as some medication and diving don't mix.

Do not consume alcohol within 12 hours of a dive.

If you have not completed a dive in an extended period of time, enroll in a refresher course or conduct a familiarization dive at the pool and review normal and emergency diving procedures.

Maintain good physical readiness.

Ensure your equipment is in good condition, operating properly and periodic maintenance is being completed in accordance with the owner's manual.

Strictly adhere to the No Decompression tables.

Contact Port Operations via VHF radio channel 73 or by calling 4188 prior to and upon completion of each dive.

Do not dive within 24 hours of flying.

Plan your dive and dive your plan.

Contact the NAVSTA Dive Locker by calling 4444 if you have any diving questions or concerns.

What the Navy wants you to know before you go

By Chief Mass Communication Specialist (SW) Maria Yager, Navy Personnel Command Public Affairs

MILLINGTON, Tenn. (NNS) -- The Navy announced the establishment of the Career Transition Office (CTO) July 30 to assist Sailors transitioning between the Navy's active and Reserve components.

"The overall goals of the Career Transition Office are to ease the transition of personnel into active duty and Reserve billets, decrease transition processing times and error rates, and increase Reserve affiliation among qualified Sailors leaving active duty," said Vice Adm. Mark Ferguson, chief of naval personnel.

The CTO was established under the Navy's continuum of service initiative. It is designed to develop flexible service options to meet Sailors individual career objectives.

"The Navy Reserve offers excellent opportunities for Sailors to continue their Navy careers while pursuing their goals in the civilian world. By reaching out to those Sailors leaving active duty, the Career Transition Office will help them make informed decisions about the options available to them in the Navy Reserve. Navy Reservists often claim they have the best of both worlds," said Vice Adm. Dirk Debbink, chief of Navy Reserve.

According to NAVADMIN 229/09, the first of three spirals is to be phased in over the next 14 months. The CTO is focusing on the 1,700 officers who depart the Navy annually. The CTO seeks to increase the number of departing officers who affiliate with the Reserves which will further fortify the Reserve component with experienced Navy veterans.

Spiral two will address enlisted personnel transitions, integrations with Career Management System Interactive Detailing and Sailors separating due to Perform to Serve. Spiral three will address Reserve component to active component flow.

"We are reaching out to officers every day. We talk to officers in Iraq, Japan, Germany, and on deployment at sea. Regardless of where you are in the world, we can help you," said Ensign Andrea Fallas, a Reservist recalled to work as a transition assistant assigned to the CTO.

Benefits for Reserve affiliation include inexpensive medical and dental coverage for Reservists and their families, up to a $20,000 Reserve reenlistment bonus, up to $75,000 in special pay for officers, and additional training if rating conversion is offered. Reservists also maintain base MWR, exchange and commissary privileges.

Additionally, Sailors departing after six years of active duty who are eligible for the Post-9/11 GI Bill may be eligible to transfer education benefits to their spouse or children by incurring and completing the four-year additional Armed Forces service requirement in the Navy Reserve.

The Navy Reserve offers a two-year deployment deferment for Sailors who join the reserve within six months of leaving the active component. Sailors who affiliate with the reserve after six months, but within one year of leaving active duty, qualify for a one-year deferment from involuntary mobilization.

Future program plans for the CTO include managing all enlisted personnel by directing active to reserve transitions, centralizing administrative actions in processing and streamlining non-mobilization Reserve-to-active-duty transitions.

For more information, read NAVADMIN 229/09 and visit the CTO Web site at <http://www.npc.navy.mil/CareerInfo/Transition/>.

MCPON urges Sailors to look out for shipmates

By Mass Communication Specialist Senior Chief Bill Houlihan, Master Chief Petty Officer of the Navy Public Affairs

WASHINGTON (NNS) -- During a conversation with Sailors Aug. 5, the master chief petty officer of the Navy (MCPON) said that stress on the Navy family and operational stress control will be two significant points of emphasis for him for the rest of the summer.

"We have to look out for each other. I need everyone to be on the lookout for the signs of stress because too often our Sailors aren't going to seek help on their own," said MCPON (SS/SW) Rick D. West, when he spoke with Sailors assigned to the White House Communications Agency on board Anacostia Naval Station.

"No one should feel they're in this by themselves."

West has been addressing stress control most of the summer. He says it's the Sailors who have concerns but don't share them with leaders and shipmates who worry him as much as those crew members who are referred for counseling or treatment.

"As much as we know about it and as many tragedies we've had to endure, I'm betting there are still thousands of people across our Navy who need help but aren't asking for it."

West said it is his intent to discuss the problem with every group of Sailors he speaks with and focus on breaking down the myth that admitting to a problem is a sign of weakness or can hurt a Sailor's career.

"That's the biggest problem as I see it. Too many of us feel that depression or suicidal ideation is a stigma, a character flaw that we're ashamed to admit. Well...none of us have good days every day."

West will be filming a video on operational stress control which should hit the fleet by the end of the summer. He said he would like to use that opportunity to discuss with Sailors of all ranks different approaches to recognizing and dealing with stress.

"From seaman to admiral, we have a shared responsibility to stay ahead of the curve. What does that mean? We train hard, stay fit and healthy, look out for each other. When you notice signs of stress in yourself or others – cutting corners, irritability, trouble sleeping – talk to a shipmate, friend, family member or someone else you trust. If you see the signs of more serious stress, get help immediately from your chain of command, chaplain or medical provider."
